Networkx3

Networkx3 delivers

Networkx3 delivers data and voice infrastructure solutions, specialising in the installation of fibre optic, blown fibre and telecommunications systems.

We provide high quality products and operate, literally, with military precision: most of our team of highly qualified professionals were recruited after distinguished careers in the Armed Forces.

We work at the highest security clearance attainable and are one of the few fibre optic companies that do not sub-contract. This means our products and services are delivered with unrivalled efficiency, at a cost that is competitive and transparent from the outset.

Expertise and experience equal a great service – round the clock

Our business is driven by an unrelenting dedication to customer service. Thirty years of experience across a broad range of sectors translates into unparalleled expertise, available to all our clients 24/7.

This is why our customer-base includes some of the country's most significant organisations. We were recently awarded ISO:9001 status, demonstrating a commitment to quality throughout the supply chain.

However, high profile customers are only part of the story at Networkx3. We also service smaller sites and private customers with diverse data cabling needs.

Our end-to-end network infrastructure services include:

- Fibre optic installation
- Voice and data communications
- 24-hour service and maintenance
- Design and planning

Key players lead a team of seasoned professionals

Networkx3 is more than a company: it's our way of life and our future. All our people have invested in the brand – so we deliver on time and on budget, consistently and without fail.

Networkx3 was founded in 2003 by Managing Director Ian Ashworth and works alongside co-founder, Julie Windle, who is the company's Financial Director, and Dave Thompson, Operations Manager, who joined in 2008 following a successful career at BT.

Our senior managers are supported by a team of professional specialists with unrivalled skills and consummate knowledge of their field. The majority of our people were hand-picked from the military – many after serving in the Royal Signals.

This enables us to tap into a truly unique mix of personal qualities and deep technical knowledge. The background of our team means they have been tested under some of the toughest conditions imaginable.

Reliability, efficiency and precision are our watchwords

This level of expertise allows us to work on sensitive incidents and major projects, such as disaster recovery operations. Our strong military connection and highest level of security clearance enables us to understand the fast-moving dynamics of assignments.

As a result, we have built a reputation for delivering with efficiency, precision and innovative flair that is unsurpassed in the industry.

We don't just do a great job – we do it quickly and effectively. This minimises downtime, reduces disruption, and leads to a more cost efficient outcome for our clients.
